

William Woodward, 18, Falls On Gun, Wounds Self Critically While Checking Traps Today

Accident Occurs Near Confederate Avenue; Father Assists Victim.

SHOT PENETRATES BOY'S SHOULDER

William Woodward, 18, West Confederate avenue, is in the Annie M. Warner hospital with a gunshot wound in the right shoulder as the result of an accident while checking his trap lines this morning near his home. His condition is described as critical.

Woodward told members of his family who were summoned to his assistance by his shouts, that he had been returning to his home about 9:20 o'clock this morning when the accident occurred.

He stated that he was walking under vines and underbrush when he stumbled.

Falling forward, the muzzle of his single-barrel shotgun was pressed against his right shoulder.

As he fell the gun was discharged and the load of shot blasted a hole through the shoulder.

Father Answers Call

Woodward's father, Joel Woodward, heard the shot and thought his son had found a skunk in one of the traps and had destroyed the animal. It was not until he heard the boy's calls for help as he made his way toward the home, that the father became alarmed and went to his assistance.

The father and Charles Woodward, 22, brother of the victim, helped William to the house where he awaited the arrival of Dr. Edgar A. Miller, summoned by telephone from a neighbor's home.

The Gettysburg ambulance was called by Charles Woodward from the Kepner home along Confederate avenue, and the boy was removed to the hospital.

Accident Occurred near Home

The youth suffered greatly from shock and loss of blood, but remained conscious throughout the ordeal.

The shooting occurred about 500 feet southeast of the Woodward dwelling, known as the MacMillan house, along the east side of Confederate avenue.

Joel Woodward said his son had left the home about 15 minutes before the accident to examine several skunk traps that he had set. The youth regularly took the shotgun with him when he walked the trap line.

HOSPITAL REPORT

Mrs. Paul Lawyer, of Silver Run, Maryland; Wilbur Brown, Littlestown R. 2; Mrs. Walter Koonitz, Gettysburg R. 2; Mrs. Scott L. Smith, North Stratton street, and George L. Bollinger, Littlestown, were admitted as patients to the Annie M. Warner hospital over the week-end. Leo Zentz, Taneytown, and Wilbur Brown, Littlestown R. 2, were discharged today.

Car Hits Pole

Philip Redding, Gettysburg, R. 3, Escapes Injury in Zora Accident.

Philip Redding, Gettysburg R. 3, escaped injury when his car ran off the Gettysburg-Waynesboro road at Zora about 8 o'clock Sunday evening and struck a telephone pole. The impact is reported to have broken the pole and caused about $100 damage to the Redding car, which was towed to a local garage. Redding was unaccompanied.

He stated that he had been blinded by the lights of an approaching car as he drove toward Hagerstown.

TRUCK HITS POLE

A CCC camp truck, operated by Joseph Hughes, crashed into a telephone pole along the Fairfield road, near Marsh creek bridge, this morning. No one was injured and the truck was only slightly damaged, a fender being crushed and a headlight smashed.

NEW PATROLMAN NABS 2 DRIVERS

Recent Graduate of Highway School Arrests Speeders Over Week-End.

Highway Patrolman Frank Damian, assigned to duty at the local substation last Friday after being graduated the preceding week from the state highway patrol training school, made his first two arrests over last week-end when he nabbed two motorists for speeding.

Robert C. Allan, Washington, D. C., was nabbed Sunday in Carroll township, York county, on the Gettysburg-Harrisburg road for driving a coal truck at the rate of 43 miles an hour. Arraigned before Justice of the Peace Charles W. Gross, Dillsburg, Allan paid a fine of $10 and costs.

The other driver who was nabbed was Charles D. Lamade, Williamsport. He has been charged with driving at the rate of 62 miles an hour in an information filed before Justice of the Peace Charles Angell, Franklin township, York county. The violation occurred on the Gettysburg-Harrisburg road.

OBITUARY

William Calvin McLaughy

William Calvin McLaughy, 85, a retired farmer, died Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. D. Walker Woods, Jr., Highland township, near Knoxlyn Mills.

Infirmities of age caused death after Mr. McLaughy had been confined to bed for two weeks. A native of Freedom township, the deceased had resided in Adams county all his life. He was a farmer and had retired in 1912. He was a son of the late Hush E. and Martha (Hall) McLaughy.

Surviving as a daughter, Mrs. Woods, with whom he resided, and a son, John A. McLaughy, Wyomissing.

BAKERY AND OIL TRUCKS COLLIDE; TWO RIDERS HURT

H. Reuning and Ralph Shryock Are Injured Slightly at Bonneauville.

YORK DRIVER FACES CHARGE

Two local residents were injured but not seriously, and two trucks were damaged in a collision Saturday afternoon about 3:15 o'clock on the sharp curve at the west edge of Bonneauville and the Gettysburg-Hanover road. One of the vehicles, the delivery truck for Reuning's bakery, was badly damaged and its cargo of bread, rolls and pastries crushed.

Harold Reuning, 30, residing at 66 West High street, was driving the bakery truck. He received lacerations about the head, cuts on the hands and bruises. He was treated at the Annie M. Warner hospital. Ralph Shryock, 20, 209 Steinwehr avenue, Reuning's companion, suffered lacerations of the hands and bruises and was treated by Dr. R. W. Gifford, Baltimore street.

The accident is reported to have taken place as the Reuning truck rounded the curve on its way to Gettysburg after making deliveries in the eastern section of the county. A large gasoline tank truck of the Gulf refining company, driven by H. E. Ness, 55, Mount Rose street, York, was traveling in the opposite direction.

Bakery Truck Turns Over

Ness is said to have driven over the center line of the highway with his truck and hit the left front of the Reuning truck. The latter was shoved back about 20 feet where it turned over on its right side along the side of the road throwing cakes and pies from their shelves in the truck body and damaging the truck.

Ness, who was unhurt, will be charged with driving his truck over the center line of the highway in an information that will be filed before Justice of the Peace Leo A. Storm, Bonneauville.

Damage to Reuning's truck is estimated at about $400, while the Gulf truck was damaged to the extent of $150.

The crash was investigated by Corporal J. G. Warren and Patrolman J. P. Monaghan, of the local substation of the highway patrol. A patrolman will lay the charge against Ness.

New Yorker Pays Fine

Weather conditions were held to be partly responsible for a collision Saturday afternoon about 3:50 o'clock, two miles north of here on the Harrisburg road. Investigating officers were of the opinion that one of the drivers involved in the crash was largely to blame and have charged Robert S. Waters, 26, Palmyra, New York, with parking on the highway. He was taken before Justice of the Peace William D. Brown, Hunterstown, where he paid a fine of $10 and costs.

Waters told Sergeant A. H. Shuler and Patrolman Frank Damian that he had been driving north when he stopped his car on the highway in order to allow a companion, Miss Helen Mary, Canandaigua, New York, to take the wheel.

Woman Is Bruised

Paul E. Crum, 28, Washington, D. C., came up back of the Waters car in the heavy rain and stated that he did not realize the car ahead had stopped, but thought it was still moving ahead. Unable to swing left in time to avoid the parked automobile and not wishing to strike the rear of the car, Crum drove his car off the right side of the road and onto a muddy berm where his car mired and struck a concrete abutment and the bank along the side of the highway. The car was damaged to the extent of about $40.

Crum was unhurt but his wife, Ethel May Crum, 23, received a bruise of the right leg between the ankle and the knee. Shirley Ann, aged 20 months, daughter of the couple, was riding in the car also but was apparently unhurt.

The two officers from the local substation who investigated the accident had been on patrol in that section at the time and arrived at the scene a short time after the mishap occurred.

STORE SOLD

The City market on Chambersburg street has been sold by J. William Kendelhart, Jr., to Curtis Fiohr and C. Grover Lemmon. The store is now being conducted under the new management.

BANQUET SPEAKER

'What the Constitution Means To the Individual' Is Topic For Local D. A. R. Essay Contest

Delegates and Alternates to Annual Washington Congress Are Chosen at January Meeting; Newspaper Article On Democracy Is Discussed.

The January meeting of the Gettysburg chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Raymond Topper, Baltimore street.

Mrs. Topper, regent, presided and conducted the opening exercises. The minutes of previous meetings were read and reports of secretaries and treasurer were given.

During committee reports, Miss Helen Cope announced that the subject for the essay contest has been chosen. It is: "What the Constitution Means to the Individual." The essay will be limited to not less than 900 and not more than 1,000 words. All of the judges have not yet been chosen.

Mrs. Topper reported that the books for the Log library at Kate Duncan Smith school have been sent. She then read the annual report for the year ending October 1, 1936, stating that there are 82 members in the local chapter.

Delegates and alternates were chosen for the annual continental congress to be held in Washington, April 19 to 23, 1937. The delegates are Mrs. Topper and Mrs. M. K. Eckert. The alternates are Mrs. D. C. Jacobs, Mrs. H. D. Shepherd, Mrs. Victor Dutler, Mrs. Ellis Musselman, Mrs. Anna C. Plank, Mrs. E. O. von Schwerdtner, Mrs. Henry W. A. Hanson, Mrs. C. E. Bilheimer, Mrs. R. S. Saby and Mrs. H. D. Hoover.

It was voted to give the usual contribution of $5 to Crossmore school and to Kenmore, the home of Betty Washington who married Fielding Lewis. A new year's message from Mrs. William A. Becker was read by Mrs. Topper.

Miss Cope was in charge of the program. She first read a proclamation.

'37 TAGS 'IN' CAR CAUSE OF ARREST

Kingston Motorist Had New Licenses But They Were Not Displayed.

The first arrest in this section for driving on 1936 tags after the expiration of the extension granted on 1936 plates was made on Carlisle street Sunday morning by Borough Officer D. J. Wolff.

When he stopped the car driven by Miss Helen Mahaffrey, Kingston, the officer found that although the car was being driven on 1936 plates the 1937 tags were being carried in the automobile. Wolff pointed out that the tags must be displayed and arraigned the driver before Justice of the Peace John C. Shearer.

After the driver's father had tried in vain to secure legal talent to plead her case, she was released on her own recognizance to appear next Wednesday and pay a fine of $10 and costs.

During the discussion, it was revealed that the plates had been carried in the car for more than a day. The driver had suggested to her father that the plates should be displayed, but her father told her to drive on "and not to bother about the licenses."

Birthday Greetings

Today

Mrs. Ralph Taylor, Aspers R. 1. William Charles Hardwick, East Middle street.

William P. Beittler, Gettysburg R. D.

Mrs. Mary E. Slaybaugh, Gardner R. 3.

Mrs. Ralph Arnold, Aspers R. 1, 29.

William Leisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Leisher, Carlisle street, 5.

Mrs. Sadie Osborn, Biglerville.

J. Clair Galbraith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Galbraith, Chambersburg street, 9.

Nancy Lynch, 302 North Stratton street, 14.

C. W. Spriggs, Jr., Freedom township, appeared before Justice of the Peace John H. Baschore this morning and paid a fine of $10 and costs on a charge of making an improper pass at the intersection of Steinwehr avenue and Baltimore street Saturday evening.

The information was laid by Special Officer Glenn Guise.

Spriggs was charged with having passed another car travelling in the same direction at the street intersection.

MARYLANDERS WED HERE

Waldo James Henry and Elizabeth Cooper Minnick, both of Sparrows Point, Maryland, were united in marriage Saturday evening about 8:30 o'clock by Justice of the Peace John H. Baschore. The couple was unattended. The ceremony was performed in the justice's office, Baltimore street, with Harry E. Koch and Constable Glenn Guise acting as witnesses.

SCHOOLS RE-OPEN

Students of Gettysburg college, as well as those attending the Gettysburg schools, returned to their classes today following the Christmas recess.

TWO MASTERS IN DIVORCE ARE NAMED IN COURT

Final Decree in Gibson Action Becomes Effective Upon Payment of Costs.

Two masters in divorce were named this morning and a decree in divorce handed down by Judge W. C. Sheely in court.

ORDERED TO HELP SUPPORT MINORS

A final decree, effective upon the payment of the cost of the case, was filed by Judge Sheely in the action brought by Margaret E. (Troxe) Gibson vs. Neil W. Gibson, a former justice of the peace here. The divorce was asked on grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment, indignities to the person and desertion.

William L. Meals, Esq., was named master in the divorce proceedings brought by Alta (Snyder) Howe vs. Joseph L. Howe and Donald P. McPherson, Jr., Esq., was named master in the action brought by Harry C. Strevig against Annie M. Strevig.

After a hearing this morning Judge Sheely handed down an order in the case of Pearl Stahl, Aspers, charged with non-support of two minor children. She was ordered to pay $2 a week to the clerk of the courts for the care of the children and to pay the costs of the case within six months. She must enter into her own recognizance in the amount of $300 for her compliance with the terms of the order.

AUDITORS BOOST ATTORNEY'S PAY

The Adams county board of auditors this afternoon approved a salary increase for S. S. Neely, Esq., their attorney.

For the last two years Neely has been receiving $150 annually for his services. This afternoon he presented a claim for a payment of $175 "on account" as part of his 1937 salary after a conference with the auditors earlier in the day. The auditors marked "approved" on the claim presented by Neely.

The auditors refused to state what increase had been voted Neely, but court house reports placed the total sum at $200 for 1937. Neely asked the raise because of "increased amount of work anticipated this year."

The Adams county board of auditors began their annual duties of auditing the accounts of all county offices this morning. Last year the task was completed about the middle of March. Because of additional work to be handled this year it is expected that the task will require a greater amount of time.

Under the new set-up the accounts of the sheriff's office must be examined and the auditors have been asked by the federal government to supply statistics on county expenditures from 1932 to 1935.

All members of the board were on hand today: President H. H. Thomas, Secretary Samuel C. Lott and P. A. T. Bower.

Two arrests for speeding were made by Borough Officer Charles W. Culp, Jr., Sunday afternoon on borough streets and charges were filed before Justice of the Peace John C. Shearer.

Rufus W. Weaver, Gettysburg R. 2, is charged with driving at the rate of 40 miles an hour on Baltimore street, and Ello Anemoni, Chester, is alleged to have driven at the rate of 45 miles an hour on York street.

Two Speeders Are Nabbed in Borough

Shotgun Charge Passes Through Door, Strikes Man, 27; Countian Held

Fred Bollinger, Near Greenmount, Is Critically Wounded in Abdomen Sunday Morning; Police Learn Gun Was in Hands of John Witherow, 38, When Discharged.

SHOOTING OCCURS NEAR MARSH CREEK HEIGHTS; ARGUMENT DENIED

One man is in an extremely critical condition in the Annie M. Warner hospital today and another is being held prisoner in the Adams county jail as the result of a shooting Sunday morning about 9:30 o'clock in the home of John Witherow, 38, Freedom township, near Marsh Creek Heights.

Fred Bollinger, 27, a state highway employee and youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Bollinger, near Greenmount, is suffering from a gunshot wound in the abdomen, inflicted, police have learned, by a shotgun in the hands of Witherow.

Witherow, in the county jail this morning, was either unable or unwilling to state exactly how the shooting had occurred. He admitted that he

ELECT OFFICERS FOR B. & L. GROUP

Gettysburg Association Report Given; Directors Also Chosen.

The annual election of directors of the Gettysburg Building and Loan association, held Saturday evening, resulted as follows: N. B. Schurman, J. E. Snyder, John E. Stahl, M. W. Stansbury, William L. Meals, Esq., C. A. Heiges, W. A. Snyder, G. R. Thompson and C. Arthur Brame.

Following the election, the directors organized by electing these officers: President, N. B. Schurman; vice president, J. E. Snyder; secretary, John E. Stahl; treasurer, M. W. Stansbury, and attorney, William L. Meals, Esq.

The annual report of the association, which reveals earnings of six per cent to shareholders, was accepted by the directorate, and copies of the statement, together with statements of individual accounts of shareholders, will be mailed in the near future.

This association, as all others, is operated under supervision of the state department of banking. The rate of interest paid shareholders is determined entirely by the earnings, less the amount required by law to be applied to a reserve fund.

PART OF FINGER SEVERED

Walter Flannagan, Littlestown, had the middle finger of his right hand severed at the first joint this morning while operating a jointer at the Gettysburg panel company plant. George March, a plant foreman, took the injured man to the Annie M. Warner hospital, where he received treatment.

NAMES OMITTED

The names of George A. Hughes, guide, and Jesse E. Snyder, patriotic instructor, were inadvertently omitted in Saturday's paper from the list of officers installed by the Gettysburg post of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil war, Friday evening.

Opposition to Changes in Lincoln Route Recalls Local Activities in '13

REVIVAL of interest in the retention of the Lincoln highway as the main east-west artery of travel in Pennsylvania, instead of the proposed "tunnel route" that, if constructed, would deprive Gettysburg of one of its main sources of revenue—tourist travel—recalls to mind the initial efforts on the part of many Gettysburgians to have the Lincoln highway constructed.

John W. Brehm, Chambersburg street tailor, today is exhibiting a certificate dated October 14, 1913, showing membership in "The Lincoln Highway Association" when that body was first organized.

The certificate shows that Mr. Brehm paid five dollars to the association whose subject was:

"To immediately promote and procure the establishment of a continuous improved highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, open to lawful traffic of all descriptions without toll charges, and to be of concrete wherever practicable. This highway is to be known, in memory of Abraham Lincoln, as 'The Lincoln Highway.'"

The certificate is signed by Henry J. B. Joy, president, and A. P. Pardon, secretary.

The late Senator William Beales was chairman of the Adams county group which joined with similar groups extending across the country in securing the establishment of the highway, which has come to be known as "The Main Street of America."

Mr. Brehm said today that a number of Gettysburgians joined in the movement which finally achieved its objective. He said that considerable interest was manifest in the movement 23 years ago and periodically since that time when efforts were made to have the route changed.

George Mitchell, proprietor of Mitchell's restaurant, is exhibiting one of the first Lincoln highway emblems.

Both men are enthusiastic supporters of the current movement to have the Lincoln highway maintained as the main artery of travel across the state and are eager to have other Gettysburgians get behind the movement to prevent the expenditure of millions of dollars to construct a "tunnel route" which will eliminate Gettysburg from the road.

C. A. Bixler is chairman of the committee representing this district.

Perfection Is Goal of Real Christian, Says Rev. Eslinger

"The Christian's Goal" was the theme of the sermon delivered Sunday morning by the Rev. Edwin L. Eslinger, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. The text was taken from Genesis 17:1: "The Lord appeared unto Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect."

The sermon, in part, follows: "Strange it is that to suggest to the average Christian professor of today that the goal of every Christian should be perfection strikes him as a fanatical suggestion and he receives it doubtfully or with a closed mind.

"Yet he will not think that a suggestion of the possibility of attaining a measure of perfection in his chosen vocation in life is anything but a wise and wholesome suggestion that will minister to his success and advancement.

"The artist, be he painter, sculptor, or architect, the mechanic or the shopman, or indeed every man who pursues a business or professional career, looks forward to such a mastery of details as well as of broad principles that will mark him as one who has attained practical perfection in his chosen calling.

CHARGE FROM SHOTGUN HITS COUNTIAN, 27

state police, was notified of the shooting by Earl Green, the neighbor whose telephone had been used to summon the doctor. The officer went to the Witherow home immediately and arrived before Bollinger was removed to the hospital.

He found a hole in a door of the kitchen where the shot had struck. Marks on the door indicated that the shot had been fired at close range. It is probable that less than 10 feet separated the men.

Corporal Herman learned that Bollinger and Null had gone to the Witherow home about 1 or 2 o'clock Sunday morning and had spent the remainder of the night there. The argument, that is supposed to have led to the shooting, started about 9 o'clock.

Witherow is unmarried and lives alone on the farm owned by his father, Robert Witherow. John is the eldest son. Bollinger also is unmarried and lives with his parents. Null, the witness to the shooting is a nephew of Bollinger, the victim.

Denies Arguing

This morning at the county jail Witherow gave indefinite answers to questions asked by a reporter for The Times. He said he didn't remember seeing Bollinger leave the room before the gun was fired and that he had thought "it all happened in the one room until the police said he had been shot through the door."

The prisoner said first that there might have been a "friendly argument" before the shooting, but, pressed for the subject of the argument, he said "I guess there wasn't any real argument. We were just talking when I took the gun down and started to fool with it and show it to them. I had it lying across my lap when it went off."

He could not recall where Bollinger had been sitting or where he was when the shell was discharged. Later he said he couldn't remember just why he had picked up the gun, but said "nobody was mad."

Corporal Herman was out of town today, but troopers at the local substation indicated that both Witherow and Null may be questioned further this afternoon.

BULLET GRAZES OFFICER'S ARM

Former Deputy Sheriff Rufus B. Weaver, now a deputy constable in the second ward of Gettysburg, had a narrow escape from fatal or serious injury Friday evening when he was accidentally shot through the right upper arm by his own gun. Constable Weaver was returning to Gettysburg after serving a summons at Green Springs, north of Hanover, when the accident occurred. He was carrying a loaded .38 calibre revolver in his hip pocket without a holster. The gun was in a position uncomfortable to Weaver and he drew out the weapon, barrel first.

As he drove along the highway holding the revolver by its short barrel, he flipped the weapon and caught it by the handle but his finger struck the trigger and the gun discharged. The bullet passed within an inch of Weaver's chest and tore through the fleshy part of the upper arm and left the automobile through the open car window at the driver's seat.

Weaver drove to Hanover and was treated by a physician.

"First man I ever shot," Weaver observed, after he told reluctantly of the near-serious accident.

Mexico to Guard U. S. Neutrality

Washington, Jan. 4 (AP)—The Mexican government officially assured the United States Sunday that airplanes and other war implements purchased in this country will not be re-exported to Spain.

A statement handed the American embassy at Mexico City by the Mexican foreign office—following published reports in the United States that a number of used airplanes bought from American firms were being prepared in Mexico for shipment to Spain—said:

"The government of Mexico has indeed supplied war materials of its own manufacture to the government of Spain; however, with regard to war materials of foreign origin it has been its unalterable position that it would not serve as intermediary if the government of the nation concerned did not furnish its full consent thereto."

On that date in 1787 the constitution was first presented to the continental congress assembled in Philadelphia. In 1788 it was ratified by Pennsylvania, and in 1789 it was adopted.

Mrs. C. Ross Shuman read the preamble of the constitution, and a letter written by President Washington, dated September 17, 1787, presenting the constitution to the congress and recommending it to them.

Mrs. John A. Mumper read an article by Henry W. Wise Good, entitled "The Constitution Speaks." "It is a paraphrase on the constitution and includes a discussion of capital and labor.

Mrs. John Lippy gave "A Scene from Long Ago," which was a picture of Philadelphia in 1787. Her description follows: The streets were lighted by lamps; public pumps were numerous and heavy posts were placed along the gutter to keep carriages from the brick footways; there were very few factories; the house furnishings and fine clothes of the wealthy were brought from abroad, and the country round about, where there are now many fine homes, was occupied by poor farmers who raised and produced much of what they needed.

Pope Pius Blesses American Prelate

Vatican City, Jan. 4 (AP)—Pope Pius XI gave his special blessing Sunday to Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, papal legate to the International Eucharistic congress at Manila, and bade him god-speed.

Although the Pontiff slept fitfully, much troubled by pain in his legs, he had himself propped in bed Sunday morning with pillows and talked with the cardinal for half an hour, after hearing mass recited by a secretary.

The Holy Father's condition was "unchanged," Vatican prelates said.

A sedative was administered to relieve a sudden attack of pain just before dawn, reliable informants said. The recent days of suffering have reduced somewhat his resistance, Vatican sources asserted.

Cardinal Dougherty said the Pontiff was "looking well, bright and cheerful. One would hardly believe he is not well. The Holy Father talked with all his mental vigor, alert as ever. He has an astonishing faithful memory."

The Pope's sister, "Donna Camilla," who has been staying at the convent of the Sisters of Good Hope during his illness, was somewhat cheerful also.

FLORIDA YOUTHS BECOME REAL POLICEMEN

Pensacola, Fla. (AP)—Pensacola youths have the opportunity of realizing ambitions to be a policeman without waiting to "grow up." In a move to curb a "growing criminal tendency among youngsters," the Pensacola police department and the Pensacola trade school collaborated in organizing a junior police department and an honor court to try juvenile offenders.

The department membership comprises boys under 16 who passed examinations. The policemen were required to take the oath administered regular policemen and they wear uniforms.

The 12 youths making highest marks in the examination were commissioned as members of the honor court and hear cases brought before them by the junior "cops."

LEGISLATURE OPENS TUESDAY

Governor Earle Prepares Message for Joint Session; Rice On Slate Committee.

Harrisburg, Jan. 4 (AP)—Governor Earle put finishing touches to his message to the general assembly Sunday while party leaders made last minute preparations for the opening session Tuesday of the democratic-controlled legislature.

The democratic members of the house and senate will hold separate caucuses tonight to discuss policies on an imposing list of legislative problems, topped by unemployment relief, its financing and administration. The house members will meet at 8 p. m., and the senators an hour later.

Instead of the customary noon hour, Governor Earle will deliver his message to a joint session of the senate and house at 7 p. m., Tuesday night.

While a few capital visitors wandered through the marble halls Sunday, the house republican steering committee, headed by portly Ellwood Turner, of Delaware county, planned the strategy the minority party in both the house and senate will follow during the session.

The slate committee of the senate—Senators Hoffman, Mundy, Pytko, Rice, Roberts and McGinnis—worked out the last details of senate committee assignments, and made up lists of employees to take over from the republicans, who have staffed senate offices for nearly a century.

A. Boyd Hamilton, who was secretary to former Governor John S. Fisher, began removing personal belongings from the office he has occupied in recent years as secretary of the senate. John C. Morelock, of Philadelphia, has been mentioned for the job.

Employees in the office of William Gallagher, chief clerk of the house, corrected proofs of the list of house committee assignments, completed several days ago, which will be announced shortly after the legislature convenes.

Democrats will head all of the 43 standing committees in the house and the 34 in the senate.

According to some reports Senator John S. Rice, of the Adams-Franklin district, is to be chairman of appropriations.

his forgiveness and start with this new year to do with our might what we deem to be His desire for us.

"I want in the short time given to me to speak of when and how we may and are expected to attain this goal.

"To those who stress the intermediate state (called by some purgatory and by others the intermediate state of the soul referred to in the scriptures as Abraham's bosom or paradise or in a more general sense as hades or sheol) teaching that those who depart this life and enter this state may be forgiven of their venial sins and be prepared for the eternal place of bliss and glory will of course look upon this life as incomplete necessitating the completion of our preparation for final awards after death.

"Protestantism as a whole has in the past touched lightly on this subject for reasons I need not go into here but in these later days a careful student of modern literature touching the future life will find that many of our best and most highly respected protestant writers are putting greater emphasis on the place the intermediate state fills in our preparation for our final heavenly home. However, time will not permit us to go into full detail and we shall stress simply the teachings of our own church in reference to this subject.

"The Methodist fathers from John Wesley down taught that the struggle for Christian perfection was the present concern of every true Christian. And that some time before death the truly serious seeker would be made perfect in Christ. It might be an instantaneous blessing bestowed in answer to consecration and faith or it might be a progressive work of grace completed before or in the time of death. But it was essential to fit us for death and give us our hope of heaven's bliss.

Wings For Sally

by BAILEY WOLFE

Chapter 48

Party at the McDonalds'

At home Sally left word she would not be there for supper, and ran upstairs to change her dress. Since this was to be a celebration, she decided to wear a simple blue frock with trimmings of hand-made lace. The dress was one of her favorites because the lace had been taken from one of her own mother's dresses. She also had a sentimental regard for it because she had worn this particular dress that first evening when Philip had discovered her in the garden of the old Page house.

Bob Dawes was on time, as usual. His big car was piled high with packages for the party, and Bob was in high good humor.

"All set?" he cried, as Sally got in beside him. "Where do we go for the lady with the bass voice?"

"Lola hasn't got a bass voice," said Sally reproachfully. She gave him the address. "Don't be flippant about that girl—she's the salt of the earth."

"If you say so, that settles it," said Bob. He began to whistle gaily and dodge in and out of the Main street traffic recklessly.

"What on earth's happened to you, Bob?" demanded Sally curiously. "You act as if Mary had just accepted you."

"Right—first guess!" said Bob exuberantly.

"I don't believe you!" Sally stared at him incredulously. "Only the other night you said yourself she was infatuated with Philip."

"I was wrong," Bob declared breezily. She gave Philip the gate.

"Oh!" Sally drew her brows together. That might explain Philip's ill temper of the past two weeks. Perhaps that night she had seen Mary enter Philip's house at midnight was the one Mary had chosen to say goodby to Philip.

"I just saw Mary off on the train," Bob went on. "They're taking the old man to their place in New England. The whole family went, but they kept the trip pretty secret. Didn't want a lot of curious on-lookers when they put the old man on the train."

Sally wanted desperately to ask if Philip Page were there to see them off, but she dared not. They were in the neighborhood of Lola's house, now, and Sally tried hastily to think of some way to ask Bob questions without letting him suspect her motive.

"Are you and Mary really engaged, or is it one of Mary's 'trial engagements'?" Sally asked.

"Don't be a wet blanket," scolded Bob. "Of course all Mary's engagements are trial. She promises to marry me by Christmas—though of course, I'll never really believe it till I have her at the altar."

Bob stopped the car and Lola came running out to meet them. They all crowded together on the front and set out for Milltown. Sally, looking at the shabby, paintless houses and the red dirt road, washed into deep gullies, thought of the improvements that would soon come to Milltown through Philip Page's efforts. Bob cursed the Milltown roads heartily, and Lola teased him as the car struck deep depressions and bounced till its springs creaked.

"If a bunch of you fellows had to drive over the Milltown roads every day they'd soon be paved as slick as glass."

"You bet they would," Bob retorted.

Sally scarcely heard what the two beside her said. Like a chord of music that runs through the mind persistently, Bob's news sang itself over and over to Sally. "Philip is free! Philip is free!" And then the thought would come to still the music: "Philip does not want to be free. Philip loves Mary."

McDonald Gives Thanks
"Here we are! Wake up, Sally!" cried Lola.

The car was already surrounded by a host of little McDonalds. Young Joe, in the same ragged overalls in which Sally had first beheld him, leaped upon the running board of the car and displayed a gap in the row of his lower teeth.

"Look!" he shouted. "I lost a tooth! I lost a tooth! I put my tooth under the pillow and I got a penny!"

Bob carried the food to the door, and the two girls went just ahead of him. At the door they met McDonald, tall, blue-eyed, a little pale from his confinement in Warrenton's airless jail.

"What's this?" he wanted to know. "It's a party to celebrate," answer Sally. "We're having a party supper. Where's May?"

May was in the rocking chair, well enough to sit up, now, with a rug across her knees. The children crowded about her shouting "It's a party! It's a party!"

The kitchen table was soon spread with a white cloth Sally had brought. The children helped to set the places and opened all the packages. Just as they were moving May's chair to the table, a truck came lumbering up with the ice-cream, a whole gallon of it which Bob had ordered.

When they were all seated, May stilled the noise of the children with her calm voice and a lift of her hand, which had grown so thin and blue-veined during her illness.

"Hush, now. Papa's going to give thanks."

Silence fell, and all heads were bowed. Even the baby, sitting on Sally's lap, ducked its head obediently, in imitation of the others.

As the father's voice rose and fell, thanking God for the blessings bestowed on his family, Sally felt the tears rise behind her closed eyelids. Big Jim McDonald gave thanks for justice that had freed him from the accusation of crime, for mercy that had brought May through her perilous illness, for food and shelter and enough to wear, for good friends, and a job to work at.

The baby put a chubby hand on Sally's cheek, and looked up at her wonderingly. McDonald had finished now, and all heads were raised. The children waited breathlessly for the feast spread out before them.

With a new-found peace, Sally looked around her at this little group of people whose sorrows she had shared, and whose joys now were hers, too. Suddenly a joyful yell from young Joe startled them.

"Look! It's Philip—Mr. Philip's come—hurray!" Sally turned with the others and saw Philip Page standing in the doorway, hat in hand. Somehow, she was not surprised. It was as if she had known he would come. He belonged with them, too.

Riding Home with Philip

It was a wonderful party, everyone agreed. The children had been allowed to stuff themselves, for once, with all the goodies they wanted. Afterwards they had gone into the yard to play. Taking a whole box of candy to share with the neighbors children who had gathered outside to listen to the festivities. Even the eldest little girl was free to play, for Sally had insisted on keeping the baby and had finally got him to sleep. Philip and Jim McDonald smoked their pipes on the front steps and talked of the changes that would soon come to Milltown, of the paint that would brighten the houses, of the roofs that would be mended, and of the whole new water system.

Lola and Sally sat close to May, whose chair had been brought to the porch so that she could enjoy the cool breeze that had come with early dusk. The sleeping baby still lay in Sally's arms. Holding it so seemed a part of her new content and she was loath to put it down.

When Bob Dawes came to take the two girls home, they were all surprised at how late it was. First Lola and Sally got May to bed, although she protested she was not tired. Then the baby was tucked in. At last they said goodby to the children, who gathered around their father and escorted the visitors to the car.

"You've been mighty good friends in time of trouble," said McDonald, "and we won't forget it. I'm looking forward to working for Mr. Morris again. A man don't mind working his best when he knows he's doing it for a man that plays square."

"All right, pile in, you girls," said Bob Dawes to Sally and Lola. "I've got to drive all the way home tonight."

"I'll take Sally home," said Philip. "There are some things I'd like to talk over with her, and I'm going her way." He turned to Sally and spoke directly to her for the first time since he had come. "Is that all right with you, Sally?"

"Of course," said Sally. It seemed the last perfect touch to this magic evening—to ride home in the dusk, alone with Philip. Surely they could not quarrel tonight.

She climbed into the little roadster beside Philip and they drove off in the wake of Bob's big car. At the street where their ways parted, they said goodby to Bob, and took the familiar way to Rosemary street. It seemed to Sally that Philip drove faster than usual. She was in no hurry to get home, and they had said nothing to each other yet.

"Tired?" asked Philip, breaking the silence. Sally shook her head. It was the old Philip speaking, now—the Philip who had comforted her once, who had been her friend, who had taught her the value of work, and the need of fighting for justice.

All too quickly they reached Sally's door, but Philip did not stop there. He swerved to the right and brought the car into the driveway of his own home. He did not speak again till they had stopped.

"I want to talk things over," he said. "I thought perhaps you wouldn't mind coming here, and we could sit in the garden. Is it all right?"

"It's all right," said Sally. The words sounded stupid and commonplace. She stumbled getting out of the car and Philip took her hand to steady her.

FIRE HOSE GIVES UP $35 IN GOLD DUST

Arcadia, Calif. (AP)—W. Parker Lyon, wealthy collector, bought an old fire engine once used at Dayton, a Nevada mining camp, and started refurbishing it for his Pony Express museum.

Something bright at the rotting hose connections attracted his eye and he scraped out some of the dirt and panned it. It was gold, and now Lyon claims to have recovered a full ounce, valued at $35, from the ancient hose.

FAIRFIELD HI TEAMS DIVIDE

Boys Lose Fast Game to Alumni While Girls Score Easy Win.

The Fairfield high school and alumni teams divided a double-header at Fairfield Saturday evening, the alumni boys winning, 27-25, and the high school girls triumphing, 20-9.

A fourth period rally gave the alumni boys victory after they had trailed throughout the first three periods. At half time the high school lads led, 16-11. Musselman and Donaldson played well for their respective teams.

In the preliminary game the high school girls took a 10-5 lead at half time, which they successfully protected in the second half.

Developing Scoring Punch Concerns Coach Forney; Mechanicsburg Here Friday.

Gettysburg high school's basketball team will try for its second straight victory Tuesday evening when it journeys to Martinsburg, West Virginia, for a game.

In the last few days of practice Coach George Forney has been working hard to develop a better scoring punch. The Maroons lost their first game of the season to Harrisonburg, 20-17, but downed Charlestown, 22-11. In both games the locals got off to poor starts due to their inability to hit the cords in the first half. Overcoming these slow starts is the current task of Coach Forney.

Martinsburg is reputed to have a strong aggregation that is certain to prove a severe test for the Maroons.

Tuesday's game will be the final tune-up tilt for the locals in preparation for the opening of the Southern Pennsylvania interscholastic league here Friday evening when Mechanicsburg, last year's

Out of the Past

Happenings of days gone by as chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg
Times the files reveal.ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO Canada appears to be almost on the eve of a revolution.At a meeting of the citizens of Gettysburg, held at the house of Mr. Yeatts, on Saturday evening, the 17th inst., favorable to the formation of a Lyceum, the Rev.
Michael Jacobs was called to the chair, and J. A. Adair was appointed Secretary. When, on motion, it wasResolved, That a committee of five be appointed for the purpose of forming a constitution for said Lyceum, to report at an adjourned meeting.The following gentlemen were appointed said committee:Dr. Jno. Parrish, Rev. Wm. M.
Reynolds, Jas. Cooper, Esq., Eli
Bentley and Dr. D. Gilbert.Resolved, That this meeting adjourn to meet again on Saturday evening, the 31st inst., at 8 o'clock
p. m., at the court house.Michael Jacobs, Chair'n.
J. A. Adair, Sec'y.The new edifice of Pennsylvania college at Gettysburg consists of a centre building and two wings, the whole making a front of one hundred and fifty feet. The building is 4 stories high.On the four Grecian Doric columns rest an appropriate entablature, together with the roof, cornice, and blocking course of the front of the centre building. The portico projects 14 feet from the centre building and is made accessible on the outside by a flight of steps equal in width to the whole front. The edifice is composed of brick, and the whole exterior will be painted white. The building besides a hall and passages on every floor the entire length of the buildings, will contain 75 apartments or rooms, 54 of which are designed for the use of the students—the remainder are a College Hall, 42 by 22 feet; Library and Lyceum of the same size; 2 rooms for the Literary Societies, each 43 feet by 19, in the 4th story for recitation rooms; refectory 41 by 21½ feet, together with the necessary apartments for the steward and family.

R. G. Harper, Esq.—Dear Sir: Let me inform your readers, and our kind friends that the "Keystone Rangers," Capt. Horner on last evening received the Christmas gift our friends of "Old Adams" have sent us. I wish you could have been here to see the grateful looks, and hear the "piled-up thanks" coming from hearts firm enough to brave danger in its worst form, yet know how to appreciate the kindness of dear friends at home. To all kind donors, and friends, let me say to you, for the company, that we thank you most kindly, and hope that ere another Chris-mas rolls around, your now disturbed homes will assume their former peace and quiet.

Respectfully, yours,

A. M. Hunter, Lieut.

PRIDE

Trouble now is pride tomorrow.

Man with every setting sun Likes to sit about and talk over everything he's done;Hear him prattle at his fire: "This I did in times of doubt."

Grave my problem seemed to be.

This is how I worked it out.

Set for me were trap and snare; all the odds against me laid.

This is how I mastered them.

Others ran but there I stayed."Failure now is pride in time. Hear man talking day by day.

What is it that makes him proud?

Easy tasks and hours of play.

Not at all. His memories turn backwards to some by-gone time.To that hard and toilsome road and that tedious upward climb;To the poverty of old, to the dangers battled through,To the cares that he has borne and the deeds he dared to do.Man must have his joys to boast; he must have his bit of pride.And these satisfactions lie in the pleasures of denial;In the dreary days and long and the doubting and despair;In the cares he has to face and the blows he has to bear,For the things which make success and the thrill of victory sweet.Ahe the hardships overcome and the hazards of defeat.

THINGS NOT CHARGED

MY THOUGHTS go back to an old German couple, from whom I rented a room while in college. I paid a very modest sum, and the bill came to me for the same amount each month. But there were things that were not on the bill—the kindly good mornings, the solicitude for my health and progress in my studies, the occasional flower or fruit in my room, left while away, the companionship and talk at odd moments, and the example of two lives that were a success in life. These were not charged.Th boy in college little realizes how many are the things for which he is not charged. He pays his tuition, books, rent in the dormitory, the many extras that are essential to the pursuit of his course, and for his diploma at the close of his four years—but things not charged are the companionship of his mates, the lingering inspiration of those long gone out into the world into usefulness, the character taught upon the football and baseball field and in the classroom, and the opportunity granted for self-control and self-reliance, among numberless other things.In a free country like America we often complain about increasing taxes, and about many other privileges of citizenship, but we forget all too often that we are not charged for liberty, for our right to come and go as we please, for the opportunity to rise as high as our abilities, courage, and application may aspire, and for the chance to share in the created beauty and achievements of those along lines other than our own.We are not charged for the sunlight, for the air we breathe, for the hope in our hearts, for friendship, for happiness that arrives through appreciation, or for thousands of gifts made free to us all by the Creator himself.I get a bill for a piece of work—but I am only charged for materials and for time, and for only a portion of the great expense that that workman had to y in order to make him so efficient and worthy of my hire.
He charged me nothing for the joy that he received in doing his work well, or for the pains that he went to in order to please me.How little we realize the extent to which others pay our way through life. Can we, therefore, honestly and justly complain because so much that we do, or render in service, goes apparently unrewarded?

Center of Madrid Shelled

Madrid, Jan. 3 (AP).—Shrapnel and artillery shells dropped into the center of Madrid Sunday in a new burst of military activity and sent citizens scurrying hurriedly for cover.Throughout Sunday morning there was a heavy artillery duel at Villa Verde on the western front. Fascist planes flew over the city to reconnoiter, but dropped no bombs.Preparations were pushed for a vigorous offensive against the fascist besiegers outside Madrid, to be led by international volunteer troops, but the center of fighting continued on the southern front near Cordoba.There the government claimed it that the Spanish civil war might spread to the rest of Europe Sunday as the result of seizures and re-ships.Apprehension spread throughout Socialist circles in Spain and observers in European capitals feared the easing of tension by the Anglo-Italian agreement to respect each other's rights in the Mediterranean may be shortlived.Britain, however, won from Italy a guarantee to keep "hands off" eign minister, disclosed with the publication of the Mediterranean agreement to have assured London three days ago:So far as Italy is concerned the integrity of the present territories of Spain shall in all circumstances ing in Westminster Abbey seemed to many to have summarized the state of alarm, saying "the world is like a gunpowder magazine in which lunatics walk with flaming torches."

Ends Sanction Bitterness

Fundamentally, the pact signed at Rome was viewed as a definite conciliation of Anglo-Italian bitterness born of Premier Benito Mussolini's conquest of Ethiopia and the invoking of sanctions.But the new danger zone is off the Spanish coast, and many feared it may become a more active threat to peace than was the Mediterranean with Italy and Britain at loggerheads—but carefully avoiding open

SMALL GARDENS
PLACE LIMIT ON EVERGREEN SIZE

Shrubs With Attractive Flowers Help Make Up for Lack of Space.

By GISELA GRIMM

(In the New York Herald Tribune)

The evergreens in the small garden must meet the same requirements as the flowering shrubs. They must, even at maturity, remain of a moderate size. Also they must possess distinction and refinement of character to be worthy of the valuable space they occupy. If the evergreen has attractive flowers as well as foliage, it is so much the more to be desired.

Many of the broad-leaved evergreens have lovely flowers. Of these, the andromedas are unexcelled for small gardens. They have deep green, leathery foliage turning to an attractive reddish bronze in winter. The Japanese andromeda (Pieris japonica) in April and May has white, bell-shaped flowers in drooping clusters, from which it takes its common name of lily-of-the-valley shrub. The mountain andromeda, or fetterbush (Pieris floribunda), has upright clusters of blood and blooms a week later. Although not quite so attractive as the Japanese andromeda, the mountain andromeda, which is a native of the mountainous regions of the eastern United States, seems to be better adapted for use in American gardens.

Thrive in Acid Soil
Both grow best in partial shade and are acid-soil plants. One should not attempt to grow them unless one is willing to provide for them a loose, well drained soil rich in acid leafmold or peat.

The drooping leucothoe (Leucothoe catesbaei) is sometimes called andromeda. It is a native plant, desiring the same type of soil and exposure as the andromedas, and is splendid for planting with them. Its habit of growth is graceful. The stems are arched, reddish in color, and the leaves are a shining dark green in summer, turning to a beautiful bronzy purple in winter. In April and May fragrant, waxy-white flowers droop from the axils of the leaves.

Evergreen Azaleas Hardy
Some of the evergreen azaleas are hardy except in the severest climates and are worth planting even if they are occasionally killed. Azalea hino-degiri is among the best. In the spring the foliage is completely hidden by the masses of brilliant scarlet flowers. Azalea macrantha is similar, but blooms late and has flowers of salmon-red. Azalea indica alba (dedifolia) is a large-flowering white kind which is worth trying. These azaleas also need an acid soil and ample moisture. Although they will grow in the shade, they need sun for the greater part of the day if they are to flower freely.

Among the needle evergreens the owner of the small garden also has a fairly wide choice. The yews (Taxus), because they lend themselves so well to shearing and because they retain their beauty at all seasons, are highly recommended. They are hardy and never burn to a sing, Pa. There are three grand-children.

He was a life-long member of the Lower Marsh Creek Presbyterian church.

Funeral services Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the H. B. Bender and son funeral home with the Rev. D. W. Woods, his pastor, officiating. Interment in Lower Marsh Creek cemetery.

Mrs. Millard Wade
Mrs. Millard Wade, of Cleveland, Ohio, died Sunday morning at 7:30 o'clock at her home following an illness of pneumonia.

Besides her husband she is survived by the following brothers and sisters: L. L. Deatrick, manager of Coffman-Fisher's department store, center square; Andrew Deatrick, Cambridge, Maryland; Hugh Deatrick, of Athens, Ohio; Lawrence Deatrick, Minerva, Ohio; Mrs. Lois Holton, of Princeton, West Virginia, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Deatrick, Minerva, Ohio.

The death was the second in the Deatrick family in a month, a daughter having died in Canton, Ohio, early in December.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Deatrick were called to Cleveland Sunday.

Charles E. Fuller
Funeral services for Charles E. Fuller, a Reading company passenger brakeman, of 39 South Seventeenth street, Harrisburg, who died Friday night, will be held Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the Fowler funeral parlors, Harrisburg, with the Rev. William M. Taylor, pastor of the Stevens Memorial Methodist church, officiating. Interment will be in the Shippensburg cemetery.

He was 61 years old and is survived by his widow, two brothers and two sisters.

He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Conductors, No. 449.

Mr. Fuller was employed for many years on the former Gettysburg and Harrisburg railroad as a brakeman.

Services Held for Rev. Stonebraker
Funeral services for the Rev. Elias William Stonebraker, 76, who died of heart failure in St. Petersburg, Florida, Friday, were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Princess Juliana and Peasant Of Same Name to Wed Thursday

Holland Permits Woman Born at Same Hour and Day as Future Queen to Marry in Little Village as Royal Wedding Takes Place at The Hague.

The Hague, Jan. 4 (AP).—A peasant's daughter and a future queen, both named Juliana, will be the only girls in all Holland to wed next Thursday.

One is the Crown Princess Juliana born to royalty. The other is Juliana van de Meer, born to peasant life in the little village of Oegstegeest near Leyden.

One will have a wedding attended by European royalty, the other a village church ceremony with friends.

The coincidence of birth at the same hour on the same day twenty-seven years ago linked the two Julianas. The government planned first to permit no other wedding but that of the crown princess Thursday, but because of the mutual birthday and correspondence between the Julianas the exception was made Sunday.

The peasant Juliana will marry plain Martinus van Stijn, a lad from her home village, the crown princess, the German Prince Bernhard of Lippe-Biesterfeld.

Sunday the princess busied herself with last-minute preparations and declined to reveal what she or her bridesmaids will wear.

Juliana and Prince Bernhard, with two bridesmaids and two flower girls to hold her long train, will leave the royal palace in the historic golden coach promptly at 11 a. m.

The carriage will follow cavalry, artillery and mounted police, three coaches of bridesmaids and flower girls. A coachman will walk beside each of the eight horses, four lackeys will march beside each door, and a picked body guard of officers will ride before and behind the golden coach.

Queen Wilhelmina will ride with Bernhard's mother, the Princess of Lippe-Biesterfeld in a coach drawn by four horses.

While the remainder of the pro-

Asks Bids on 72 Cars For Highway Patrol

News reports from Harrisburg state that the department of property and supplies has advertised for bids to supply 72 automobiles for use by the state highway patrol.

Captain Charles H. Quarles, patrol superintendent, said 22 of the cars will replace badly worn vehicles now used by captains, lieutenants and inspection sergeants. He will assign the remaining 50 for patrolling sections of the state highway system where the greatest number of traffic accidents occur, augmenting the regular motorcycle patrols.

One of the new vehicles may be sent here for the use of Inspection Sergeant A. H. Shuller.
